MONDAY AFTERNOON, OCTOBER 20.

House of Refuge .- A writer in the National Intelligeneer, of this morning, suggests to the City Councils the propriety of converting to the purposes of a House of Refuge the building now occupied as an Infirmary, between the City Hall and jail. He says:

"It would answer the purpose extremely well, with little or no alteration, while the $10,000 so liberally offered by Mr. Corcoran would be enough to furnish and arrange it, without any expense to the city." "This building is, to be sure, now occupied for other purposes, but no doubt the gentlemen under whose control it now is would very willingly relinquish it for so benevolent and useful an object. At any rate, as they use it now only for their own private benefit, the claim that they might be supposed to have upon it ought not to be ald for a moment to interfere with important would unquestionably grant it at once to the application of the city authorities."

We would reply :

1. Mr. Corcoran and other gentlemen have made a generous offer to bestow a sum of money on condition that thirty thousand dollars be old and perishing edifice.

None, we are sure, who have correct and ample knowledge upon the subject, will withhold the gratitude so justly due the conductors of this establishment; and we can scarcely believe for a moment that there are any in our midst who would withhold from them even far greater privileges than they now possess in the occupancy of their present location. Sure we are that, with the knowledge the members of Congress possess of the Infirmary and its influences, that body will never withdraw from it aught of the aid it has hith-

We are anxious for the establishment of a House of Refuge, and unite heartily in the desires expressed by the writer in the Intelligencer, that the purpose may be speedily consummated : but we believe that the ability and the will shadow upon any other benevolent or salutary Franklin for the years 1739, 1740, and 1741. his guns, in that matter, be completely spiked institution in our city; and, least of all, upon It may not be known to all our readers that the Infirmary, by whose skill and benignity so Franklin edited, printed, and published an Almany blessings have been dispensed to our manac with the above title for twenty-six years;

IRELAND .- We have never heard a traveller through this little isle speak of its natural physical characteristics in other than terms of the highest admiration. How pitiable is it, therefore, to behold its people in their condition of degradation and want! But how obvious is the cause! Ireland is beautiful and fertile, and News says: "The new steamboat Wm. Selden, Irishmen are in this country industrious and under the command of Captain Fairbank, will prosperous. The atmosphere of freedom is commence its regular route in a few days. It enjoyed by both.

But the partial recuperation of the Green Isle river." will be a work of early achievement through the instrumentality of English skill and enterprise. A late number of "Saunders' Newsletter" has an important announcement, to the effect that "a very influential company has been formed in England, at the head of which is Prince Albert, for the buying up of lands in Ireland. Their purchases are expected to be on a most extensive scale, and persons in their employment are now busied in obtaining information on the spot as to the position and value of various estates."

Route to California.

A meeting was recently held on board of the Pacific, when abreast of Monterey, California, of persons who had crossed the State of Nicaragua on Vanderbile's Independent Line, at which by Dr. W. M. Rabe and Wm. Gass, of Sacra- We have not yet visited it, but infer from vamento city, and J. W. Schenck, of San Francisco) were unanimously adopted, denouncing in unmeasured terms this line, and alleging that the grossest deceptions had been used, and the vilest imposition practised by its agents and managers. It is admitted that this route has natural advantages, under proper management. The public are cautioned by the meeting, who assert that they have but little confidence in the integrity and honor of parties connected with the Vanderbilt Line, and none at and in the Workhouse 34. all in their general agent, Mr. Vandewater.

These are grave accusations.

CASTLES IN SPAIN .- The New York Daily Times, of Saturday, says that "there is a great deal of speculation affoat about the probable upshot of the special Spanish Envoy's visit to Washington. All that appears to be known is, that such a messenger is on his way thither; that he goes backed up with a subscription paper bearing the signatures and counter-signatures of Victoria R., Palmerston, and Louis Napoleon; that a guarantee of the independence of Cuba is to be demanded; and that Mr. Webster will have the handling of the man and the matter. The impression is prevalent that Chevalier Hulsemann is likely to have a sympathizing companion in his mortifying diplomatic overthrows. It would not be the first time that Spain and Austria have consoled themselves together for common adversity and common contempt. The house of Hapsburg was wont to have a family feeling in such calamities."

If "Mr. Webster will have the handling of public interests; and the President or Congress the man and the matter," we can afford to dispense with all anxiety on the subject. We have never known him to be worsted in such an affair, nor his country to regret confiding such matters to him.

A CAPTIVE MAYOR !- We were not a little raised; and we have no right to understand astonished, on looking into the police doings them as offering it on other terms, nor does it this morning, to find that the kind and gentlebecome us to suggest other terms to them, and manly Mayor of our sister city, Henry Addison, especially the investment of their funds in an esq., had been bound over in the sum of five hundred dollars, on Saturday last, to keep the 2. GENERAL SCOTT .- This noble and gallant old chieftain was nominated for the Presidency by the Whigs of Pennsylvania and Ohio, and in both of these States have the Whigs been beaten. Now this is not the General's way of doing things. He has fought many battles, and never known defeat. But then he was present and managed them himself. > EQUALITY .- It is asserted in some of the Northern newspapers that there are more landholders in the State of Massachusetts alone than in all England and Ireland together. We do not know what authority this declaration has; but it accords with our own impressions, and tells, in a forcible and practical way, the difference between the tendencies of an aristocracy and a republic.

CRUEL RESENTMENT!-A person being asked feated, the Penneylvanian says, by the close combination between the Whigs and Natives. "I did it out of pure revenge."

The recent great letter of Henry Clay, to a ommittee of New York gentlemen, on the bearing, scope, end and aim of the Compromise measures, and the agitation of the nullifiers of the South and of the abolitionists of the North. upon the subject of those measures, is winning golden opinions in all quarters. It is, perhaps, the greatest State paper—the most calm, clear, comprehensive elucidation of the genuine republican principles of the Constitution of our country-that ever emanated from that great and venerable statesman's gifted pen.

The time will come-it cannot be far offwhen Henry Clay will cease to utter his warning voice to his countrymen; when the great and noble Pacificator, who has many times proved the Saviour of his country, will go down to the tomb. Tears will then be shed in heartfelt earnestness. The whole nation will mourn and deeply regret that Henry Clay had never been exalted to its Chief Magistracy. Ingrates who have been exalted to power and consequence by the courage, mighty efforts, and indomitable perseverance of Henry Clay, in building up and sustaining the Whig party, and causing it to be victorious, will then have an opportunity to feel ashamed of themselves, to cover themselves with sackcloth and ashes, and cry tears of real penitence and shame for having betrayed, cheated, wronged, and cast overboard, and then tried to forget the great statesman and patriot, to whom and to whose mighty efforts they were indebted for all of the ephemeral greatness which they had attained.

But the object for which these reflections were commenced was, to copy from the Philadelphia North American, a leading Whig journal much petted and patronised by the present Administration, a palpable hit at some persons either in or out of power-the reader, perhaps, can best tell which.

The North American publishes Mr. Clay's great letter, and, in glowing terms of eulogy of its merits, calls public attention to the clear and noble truths it portrays in such plain and comprehensive terms that he who runs may read and understand its every sentence. In conclusion the editor says:

"If any peculiar personal merit attaches to one person more than another for the results of that compromise in restoring harmony to the country and in silencing the rude voice of agitation, the man who deserves it most, who first braved the storm and most gallantly unfurled the banner of the Union, calling upon all parties to come to the rescue, was Henry Clay. He it was who flung himself into the breach; who incurred all the responsibility; and who counted no consequences when h considered his country in danger.

"And when we see demonstrations got up pro fessing to glorify those compromise measures, and to renew allegiance upon the altar of the Union—though really designed for the glorification and fame of particular individuals—without one reference of respect to this old and faithful patriot, we turn with indignation from the spectacle, as a heartless exhibition of selfishness, as unjust as it is unworthy and discreditable. We shall not stop to inquire the cause of these repeated omissions to render the proper tribute to the author of the Compromise, or to scan the motives which have ced others to appropriate the honors which he had so nobly won. But we can assure those who have thus attempted to elevate themselves at the expense of Henry Clay, that the country has not been an indifferent spectator; and though the march of justice may be slow, it is still sure and

A Roland for an Oliver.

Our worthy neighbor of the Republic is fond of twitting our worthy neighbor of the Union of having been a member of the famous Nashville Convention, as if that membership were the unpardonable sin, past all forgiveness.

Could be any more purpose, and to do this without casting a and containing the editorials written by Dr. twit his contemporary of the Union? Would not

> ALAS! HOW CHANGED!-The New York Tri bune commences its notice of the late Union letter of Mr. CLAY as follows:

"There was a time when any letter from Henry Clay to his friends in this city on the ruling topics of the day would have been offered as to the Herald and Journal of Commerce. That, however, was before the accession of Charles O' Conor, A. H. Mickle, C. M. Conolly, ers and confidential correspondents. was to be served rather than used, the Tribune was deemed a fit medium for his communica tions with the public. Now we concur in the opinion that when men wish to profit by Mr. Clay's influence over the public mind, who have nearly hunted him out of public life, and who for a quarter of a century have defeated his honorable aspirations to the highest civil trust by the grossest misrepresentation of his political views and purposes, and by the blackest calumnies on his personal character, they do well to choose for their organs gazettes which never missed a chance to stab him, while stabbing could satiste a grudge or subserve a partizan purpose. Those who have hunted the great Kentuckian to the verge of the grave should prepare their crocodile tears for exhibition at his burial, is as was to be expected; but it is not well that they should, to subserve their own profitable use of his influence and (no thanks to them!) indestructible popularity.

New Light-House.—Mr. John W. Bennett, late of Minot's Light-House, Boston, is to-day exhibiting in miniature a new description of the control of the light-house, which he offers for the use of the United States government. It is, in our opinion, beautiful, economical, and efficient. Whoever has witnessed the brilliant appearance of an apothecary's windows can comprehend, in a moment, an important feature in the improvement proposed. We trust Mr. Bennett may have a favorable hearing; for we believe his superior plan, and the moderate and modest terms he proposes, cannot but meet with favor.
